

memo

Wednesday, March 24, 2004

To: Those in the know
From: Those in the No

Re: "because it's all a big chain of events that has to be looked at in context from a big kind of overview. And who has that? Who has an overview, right? Because to be over it, to have an overview is to be outside of it. And no one can get out. We're all in too deep."
—Spalding Gray, "Rivkala's Ring"

Match the causes to their effects (should be easy, you have an overview)

I got up today because	the words on the page were blurry.
I smoked cigarettes today because	the phone rang.
I smiled at Heather because	the cats told me to.
I rolled my eyes because	there is food in the refrigerator.
I scratched my elbow because	I burped.
I wrote this memo because	nothing makes sense anymore.
I went to the bathroom because	almonds are yummy.
I poured myself a glass of water because	the light was slanting just that way.
I didn't kill myself because	oleo isn't really used anymore.
I didn't get arrested because	flapjacks.